We Consider Each Planet in Each House

The experiences in lower life-forms which have built the thought-cells that the planets map, while characteristic of the planet mapping them, and having the harmony or discord indicated by this planet's aspects, have each and all related to some one or more of the 12 definite departments of life. They have related to the body's welfare, to physical possessions, to short journeys and relatives, to the home, or to some of the other distinct phases of living existence. And, even as when assimilated by the physical body calcium and phosphorous readily move to that part of the anatomy where they enter into the structure of the bones, and when iron is assimilated by the physical body it moves readily to the region in which enables it to be built into the red blood cells, so also the states of consciousness derived from experiences with a given department of life readily move to, and become built into, the compartment of the finer body mapped by the house governing that department of life.

Thus the thought-cell built finer form is divided into 12 distinct compartments, each mapped by one of the mundane houses of the chart of birth, and each divided and separated abruptly from the compartments on either side. The walls of the compartment are mapped by the house-cusps of the birth-chart, as the spokes of the horoscope wheel are called. It is chiefly to determine the sign and degree of the zodiac on each of these house cusps, which thus map the dividing line between each of the twelve compartments and the adjacent compartments, and reveals which planet or planets influence each department of life, that for a precise astrological reading it becomes necessary to have a chart erected for the time of day and geographical longitude and latitude of birth, on the day, month and year of birth. How thus to erect a chart is explained in detail, with examples, in Part One, Beginner's Horoscope Maker.

Now all sections of the physical body do not have the same vigor and strength. Neither do the thought-cells in all the 12 compartments of the thought-built finer form have the same power of activity. Those mapped by some houses, other things being equal, can do a great deal more work than those mapped by other houses.

First, Fourth, Seventh and Tenth Houses--Thought-cells have very powerful energy.

Eighth, Ninth, Eleventh and Twelfth Houses--Thought-cells have moderately powerful energy.

Second and Third Houses--Thought-cells have feeble energy.

Fifth and Sixth Houses--Thought-cells have very feeble energy.

Trinity of Life--Thought-cells desire to express through personal life, life of offspring, life in religion.

Trinity of Wealth--Thought-cells desire to express through personal property, work and employees, business and honor.

Trinity of Association--Thought-cells desire to express through thoughts and brethren, partnership and marriage, hopes and friends.

Trinity of Psychism--Thought-cells desire to express through home and end of life, death and inheritance, sorrow and imprisonment.

Personal Houses--Thought-cells desire to express through the private life.

Companionship Houses--Thought-cells desire to express through close contact with others.

Public Houses--Thought-cells desire to express through that which becomes widely known.

The thought-cells mapped by the angular houses--First, Fourth, Seventh and Tenth--are VERY POWERFUL. Those in the First and Tenth are the most vigorous of all, next are those of the Seventh, and of the thought-cells mapped by angular houses those in the Fourth are least vigorous. Because of the great power of the thought-cells mapped by any of these four houses, any planet in one of them is considered to be prominent.

Planets in other houses, in which the thought-cells have less vigor, are not considered prominent unless they aspect within a reasonable degree of closeness Sun, Moon or Mercury, or are otherwise very powerfully aspected. Every aspect a planet makes indicates a stellar aerial across the astral body picking up planetary energy of the types indicated by the planets involved and adding it to the thought-cells mapped by these planets. The more powerful the aspect the more such energy it picks up and adds to the thought-cells to give them activity.

As the Sun rules the electrical energies and the Moon the magnetic energies which together comprise the electromagnetic form, the planetary energies of the Sun and Moon have direct access to this form. And as the planet Mercury rules the nerves and the electric currents which flow over them in response to thought, its planetary energies also have direct access to this form. Energies of the thought-cells which reach and have an influence upon the physical body or the outer plane must use electromagnetic energies as a conductor. As any planet in aspect to Sun, Moon or Mercury has direct access to the electromagnetic energies, the thought-cells it maps have special facilities for making their influence felt in the physical world.

When a planet receives very powerful aspects, especially if a heavy aspect is not more than one degree from perfect, it must be considered prominent irrespective of not being in an angle and aspecting Sun, Moon or Mercury. But such prominence constitutes an exception to the general rule that only such planets in a birth-chart as are in an angle, or which aspect Sun, Moon or Mercury with a reasonable degree of closeness, are to be considered prominent.

Determining the degree of prominence of each planet in the chart is highly important; for only in this way can it be determined how much activity to expect from the thought-cells mapped by each planet. And upon the amount of activity of the thought-cells thus indicated, depends the individual's natural aptitude--as explained in full detail in How To Select A Vocation--for following a vocation involving the type of effort indicated by the planet, how important the department of life influenced by that planet is apt to be, whether or not events characteristic of that planet will play an important part in his life, and to what extent the individual's thoughts and behavior will be influenced toward the type characteristic of that planet.

The prominence of a planet in the chart of birth is far more important than the aspects it receives; for the aspects indicate thought-cell desires that readily can be altered through persistent training. But no amount of training can cause thought-cells of one planetary type to try to express through thoughts, behavior or events characteristic of any other planetary type. The most that can be done is, through proper training, to divert the thought-cell energy to work for conditions characteristic of their type which are highly beneficial

Next to the thought-cells mapped by angular houses in the vigor of activity they are able to express, and in the order that follows, are those mapped by the eleventh, eighth, ninth and twelfth houses. These thought-cells are MODERATELY POWERFUL.

The vigor of the thought-cells mapped by the second house is somewhat more powerful than that of those mapped by the third house, but the thought-cells mapped by either of these two houses should be considered FEEBLE.

Those mapped by the sixth house--and for that reason it is so significant of illness--are even less vigorous than those mapped by the fifth house, but the thought-cells mapped by either of these two houses should be considered VERY FEEBLE.

The thought-cells in the compartment of the astral body mapped by a house of the horoscope are called common thought-cells. They have been built by experiences with the things of the department of life thus indicated that are of the type of the planet ruling the cusp of the house. Although this planet may be located in some other house of the birth-chart, these common thought-cells always respond through the principle of resonance to its vibrations. The prominence of the planet ruling the cusp of a house determines the comparative degree of activity of the common thought-cells mapped by that house. The characteristics of the planet ruling the cusp of a house have an influence over the type of conditions to be encountered in that department of life. The harmony or discord, as shown by the aspects of the planet ruling the cusp of a house, indicate to what extent the common thought-cells desire and work for fortunate or unfortunate conditions relative to that department of life.

The following are the rulerships of the signs by the planets:

Aries ruled exclusively by Mars.

Taurus ruled exclusively by Venus.

Gemini is ruled exclusively by Mercury.

Cancer is ruled exclusively by the Moon.

Leo is ruled exclusively by the Sun.

Virgo is ruled exclusively by Mercury.

Libra is ruled exclusively by Venus.

Scorpio is ruled by both Pluto and Mars.

Sagittarius is ruled exclusively by Jupiter.

Capricorn is ruled exclusively by Saturn.

Aquarius is ruled by both Uranus and Saturn.

Pisces is ruled by both Neptune and Jupiter.

Uranus, Neptune and Pluto are called upper-octave planets because in some respects the influence of Uranus seems to be a higher expression of Mercury attributes, Neptune a higher expression of Venus attributes, and Pluto a higher expression of the Moon attributes. Usually they more pronouncedly influence Aquarius, Pisces and Scorpio thought-cells; but at other times the Aquarius thought-cells respond quite as readily to the influence of Saturn, the Pisces thought-cells respond quite as readily to the influence of Jupiter, and the Scorpio thought-cells respond quite as readily to Mars. Thus these three signs have a co-rulership.

Whatever house a planet rules through the sign on its cusp, it exerts a still more powerful influence upon the house of the chart it actually occupies. Wherever the planet is in the chart, it there maps highly active cells. Because of their greater activity and power they are called dynamic thought-cells. Their comparative degree of activity is indicated by the prominence of the planet. The department of life which they most profoundly affect is shown by the house the planet actually occupies. The type of conditions and events these thought-cells strive for relative to that department of life are those characteristic of the planet. The fortune or misfortune of the events relative to the department of life that they desire and work for is indicated by the aspects of the planet. The department of life indicated by a house containing one or more planet is influenced by the common thought-cells as indicated by the planet ruling the house cusp; and is also influenced by the dynamic thought-cells mapped by each planet in the house. Other things being equal--such as the aspects to each planet--the planet nearest the cusp of the house in which it is located indicates the most active and powerful group of thought-cells, and the farther removed a planet is from the house cusp, other things being equal, the less active the thought-cells it maps. If the ruler of the cusp of the house is exceptionally prominent, the common thought-cells may have more power than the dynamic thought-cells mapped in the house by a weakly aspected planet. But other things being equal, a planet actually in a house indicates more powerful and active thought-cells than the common thought-cells influenced by a planet not in the house but ruling its cusp.

It should be understood, however, that what is said in that which follows about the significance of each planet in each house, also applies to the house or houses the sign on whose cusp is ruled by the same planet; but that as a general rule the planet, if any, actually in the house more accurately describes what the more powerful thought-cells want and strive to bring to pass.
